

The Scroll of The Saddler

by Stefan Sattler

It should be obvious by now that we have not fully understood the one key attribute of Life Itself: Freedom! Namely the fact that freedom is not the opposite of law and order, but freedom is in fact a law. Freedom is the law of which all other rules have been derived of. All the laws we have created over millennia were merely invented to make freedom possible and to let the process of life flow smoothly.

But as a civilization we have forgotten this fact and thus we've failed to curtail our laws in such a way that it would eventually lead to fewer and fewer rules being needed. For the intention was, and still is, to aim for a culture where everybody is naturally fully conscious so that the concept of freedom is fully realized so that almost no more external laws are needed. So, what I am advocating now is to learn to re-write our laws in such a way that the conduct of the people under these laws will eventually lead to the need for less laws. And one key element towards this is that we revert our judicial doctrine from the principle of dogma law to the law of taboo. The concept of taboos is very much in harmony with the Law of Life whereas dogmas simply are not. Dogmas are lethal poison to a culture, a nation, a people and a civilization!

Positivistic (Dogma-) Law means everything is forbidden except for it is explicitly allowed by law. That's the wrong way around. It's about the geometry of law. Positivistic Law is inverted Negativistic (Taboo-) Law. One says, all is forbidden except it is explicitly allowed, while the other one says, everything is allowed, except it is explicitly forbidden! One works with dogmas and the other one with taboos. One is toxic law, and one is healthy law. One is Law of Death, and one is Law of Life.

It is said that the living man stands before the constitution, which translates to the fact that not the law is sacred, but the integer intent to honor and abide by the law is sacred. That means that the most important aspect of what makes a given system and its laws work is located completely outside of the realm of law. Only integrity and the will to understand each other and to honor agreements is what makes any set of rules into a beneficial and smooth working process.

And that is the surprisingly primitive situation we are dealing with is not that it would be too difficult to find the right laws and to do the right thing for mankind to achieve a sustainable level of peace and freedom for all. Instead, the problem is that there are forces, people and entities who are simply not willing to grant others the same basic sovereign rights to a free life as they themselves are enjoying. The quality of the laws is only of secondary importance because if it is clear that the living man stands before the constitution, then it is obvious that the form and the content of laws can be adjusted to the carefully evaluated needs of the people. That's what sovereignty is all about.

So, I declare the following truth. At the basis of every culture and society in the history of mankind there has to be a social agreement. A covenant between and among the living people and not with any god. That social contract is broken - or never existed at all - in our current world, and we need to fix that.

Which brings us to the question of whether the cosmos is working top-down or bottom-up. In a way all the craziness in our current world is very easy to understand. In fact it is always the same. You are complaining about the fundamental structure of all our systems of organizing communal, regional, national, state and all other common affairs, the commons. It is always built according to the well-known top-down structure. Which in itself is the logical consequence of our most basic identification and assumption about this cosmos, namely The God! The assumption is this omnipotent and omnipresent The God; which is the greatest personification of the principle of top-down, is it not? All this notion, which is the most fundamental doctrine in our Western construct of law, that he is The Creator and that he owns everything, every life and every soul, is the clearest expression of a top-down structure. But truth is, this whole creation has come into existence precisely because that force of creation is not the least bit interested in exclusive ownership but in cooperation and in sharing that overflowing wealth.

So, the problem in today's world is that everything is top-down structured and that is because we believe that this force of creation has structured all creation according to the top-down principle, when in fact it is structured bottom-up. To be really precise it's in fact structured inside-out. Meaning we should learn to perceive this force of creation as bottom-up and subsequently organize our societies, communities, states and peoples according to the bottom-up principle. In order to do this, we've got to grasp the deeper architecture of our civilizational Operating System: Rights and Laws.

Rights are what we assume, and legal bankruptcy is the inability of a legal system to provide justice to those subject to the law. An institution, especially a legal institution, reveals legal bankruptcy if, for example, it allows liars to reach the top, makes smugglers into secretaries, fraudsters into cashiers, forgers into minute takers, impostors into assessors and blackmailers into legal supervisors. Under such circumstances, only a return to generally recognized values such as truth and freedom and legal principles such as pacta sunt servanta, prohibition of arbitrariness, competition, etc., can promise improvement. #GerhardKörblerDictionaryOfLaw

That means that rights and laws in actual reality do not exist. They are assumptions, presuppositions, fiction. Lawful definition of fiction: Fiction is that dictate of justice that describes a non-existing fact as an existing one! On that basis our current law in the world is practiced. The sum total of those dictates of justice is forming what is called the Canon of Law. Now we have confirmed the fact that our rights and laws are not coming from The God but from assumptions that have been developed and implemented by man over the course of our history. Yes, including the sometimes open but very often hidden and obscured intermingling of other ancestors and entities.

What does indeed exist and is born in into every man and being are claims; in the sense of life-sustaining necessities. So, let's inquire about the difference between claims and rights. We are misunderstanding claims and rights; we are confounding one for the other. We are constantly confusing cause and effect for each other. From the tiniest and from the most mundane to the greatest and most sacred things in life. That which is given, immanent and born in by Life Itself into every man, woman and child are claims, and not rights. The rights are the consequences that we as cultures have established in the awareness of these claims, without the recognition and enabling of which no culture and civilization would be possible. And just for the record: Your claims are going to be denied if you are denying the claims of others without any serious valid reason.

The truth is, my dear mankind, that you are still ruled by the Doctrine of Discovery! Officially we are saying that the so-called Doctrine of Discovery is null and void today, but fact is that this doctrine and its template of the winner takes it all is still the most basically applied template of conducting business, science, politics, religion and everything else in human society. When I look at our human endeavors all I can see is patents, copyrights, claims of ownership and always attempts, including lies, theft and blackmail, to establish the claim of the fact that one has been the first in achieving and realizing whatever. A new medication, a new territory, a weapon or a new scientific discovery and then claim, copyright and own it. And make sure that everybody else must pay tribute, tax, customs, patent fees, usufruct and such. In a sense, that's the equivalent to the ancient Bending the knee.

Isn't it quite paradox and confusing, that when we look at what is actually happening in everyday life we see that everything is ruled according to the Doctrine of Discovery, but at the same time when I look deeply into the essence and root of all the current laws of mankind, the papers, documents and the judicial doctrines, it is all derived in the very end from the assumption that god is the exclusive owner of everything? Meaning real, actual owning isn't something for man and mankind at all. That's what it says, without explicitly saying it. Funny, we are intellectualizing one way, but we are acting 180° the exact opposite in real life.

Now, the funny thing is this. If I talked to you, all 8 billion, on a one-to-one basis, you would all say that it is the others and that you are part of the good ones because you are a believer in God. Can you see the sad and paradox irony here? It's always the others. But imagine I talked to all 8 billion and everybody is saying, it's the others. Then let me ask you. Who are the others, if not you yourself?

As I've said before, the mistake is that you start with an assumption, make this assumption into a belief and then a dogma and are now observing everything through that falsifying dogma. It is this vicious cycle that is the root cause of all systemic evil here on earth. I believe in God. God is good and thus, because I believe in God and am thus a part of him, I am per definition the good one which leaves only one option left for the other one: At maximum he could be considered as equally good, but, as is obvious by frank observation in real life, rather sooner than later he will be deemed to be the bad and evil one! Dang! Trapped in a death spiral. We could call that spiritual vanity or the Religious Dunning-Kruger-Effect.

And precisely that was the intent behind inventing a dogmatic, codified, omnipresent and omnipotent God. By implanting the idea of The God into your deepest inner core, the energetic blueprint of yourself you are per definition denied ownership of the only thing you should ever own: Your own Self! But this "First Cause" is not and cannot be exclusively outside of oneself, and it is not and cannot be a being, although it is for sure alive and conscious. But not an entity, not exclusively outside of oneself – and as well not exclusively within oneself. But all your religions tell you otherwise. For sure, because without that twist they could not build a dogmatic slave system upon that assumption.

See, man is running around like crazy for millennia, trying to claim and to own everything. From the Earth to gold, slaves and women to genomes, water, air, patents, ideas, even frequencies and the souls of the living and the dead, and much more. But we never find satisfaction, because all these things will never fulfill our true and natural longing. Namely, to be in possession of and to own ourselves! But unfortunately, all the really good things in life are only possible if you own yourself. To love, to be conscious and invest yourself in a greater cause, to marvel, to be creative and to realize Life Itself. Spiritual growth, responsibility, free will, devotion and much more are only true, authentic and valuable once you have begun to accept the only real challenge in life: Facing yourself and taking responsibility for and ownership of yourself.

So, I say: No! The strongest word and the most profound yes. Remember, it's even asked in your bible, something along the lines: And you just say one word, this one word and you shall be absolutely free and unbound! Well, this word is not any name of whatsoever messenger, entity, demon, God or whatnot. It's not any spell or mantra nor any Abra Kadabra. No! No, this is the word. It's that simple and straight forward. Because no is the strongest yes one can give. The strongest and clearest verbal, linguistic expression of intent. That's the seemingly paradox secret here. Without the possibility of no, no meaningful yes could ever exist. And vice versa, for sure. Without the option of a yes one couldn't know what no is.

So, now I'm saying no, I am not subject to Rome and/or to any branch of the Abrahamic Cult nor to the Anglo-Papal-Zionist One World Order Cult!

Instead, I propose...

The True Geometry-in-Motion of Earth and her Axis

1.) Earth' basic motion tidally locked and CCW (counterclockwise) around the Sun, like the motion of the Moon around Earth (one side always facing Earth, so-called phase-locked or tidally locked to the Earth)

2.) Add to it a 24-hour rotation CCW and

3.) A daily Axis Angle Direction Forward Ticking Clockwise (CW), a little less than  $1^\circ$  per day.

Think of Earth' motion in the following way. Imagine she is doing her rotation around the Sun like the Moon rotates around the Earth with always the same side facing the Earth. Add the motion that you think of as Earth' Wobble; like what you think is causing the Precession of the Equinox; clockwise, to the right. Add the daily rotation around herself counterclockwise. The first two motions are seemingly annihilating each other so that it seems that Earth' Axis is always fixed and pointing into the same direction in the greater/outer space.

Earth is orbiting the sun and imagine the axis is tilted at approximately  $23,4^\circ$  to the sun while the axis is always pointing to the sun, the center of that motion pattern. Obviously, it is not doing this, because if it did so, there would be summer all year on the north side of the earth. Now ask yourself: What force is pushing the axis (tilting-angle-direction) per quarter year an additional  $90^\circ$  to the right, meaning clockwise, so that it is as can be observed in reality?

As I explained there are two different kinds of motion responsible for it. These two movements are seemingly annihilating each other. That's why we obviously never really thought about it. We just never recognized that we don't have a sufficient explanation for our own Earth' (Axis') movement, because it seems to be fixed! That motion is what I've called the Syrian Dance (Sirian Dance?). It's the kind of motion we think of when we describe the so-called Wobble of the Earth which we think is what leads to the so-called Precession of the Equinox.

So then, what actually makes the Precession of the Equinox? Well, it's the same phenomenon and mechanics: The Sun and the whole Solar-System is phase-locked/tidally locked to its Greater Star which our Sun is revolving around! Whether that is Alcyone, which some say is Tara and not Alcyone at all, or any other star doesn't matter for right now for we first have to understand the basic mechanical principle and then we can apply this to the actual stars further out. We know Earth is doing a revolution around the sun and the rotation around its own axis, ok. But what we didn't understand is why the Earth Axis and her 'tilting-angle-direction' is seemingly fixed to a certain direction in space.

So, what actually is the so-called Sidereal Day then? There seems to be a misunderstanding. One full rotation of Earth around herself on her own axis is not 23 56 hours as currently claimed by official science! That would be the so-called misunderstood Sidereal Day, which is not a full rotation. Sidereal Day just means the same relative position of the stars at 23 56 o' clock as in the night at midnight the day before; but that doesn't mean a full rotation is 23 hours and 56 minutes long. Not a real full rotation around Earth' own axis.

It just means that after 23 56 hours the night sky is in the relatively same position as in the night at midnight before. And that's because these nearly 4 minutes early are equalizing the wandering and the changing of the relative position of Earth towards the stars and planets throughout one day on her way around the sun. You see, Earth is wandering approx.  $1/365$  of her full path around the sun every day including the 'curving'. By curving I mean the tiny little movement which is necessary to adjust (and rotate inward) so that always the same side would face the sun. Like the moon is doing, which I explained above, so that the way you see the stars at 23 56 o'clock is in the same relative position and direction as at midnight the day before. And at midnight, it has slightly changed. Like the clock ticking further one step every day.

Meaning the real, actual own rotational period of Earth is 24 hours! The mark at 23 56 o'clock would be more precisely called the Sidereal Point. And it surely has the same duration. 24 hours from one sidereal point to the next and not 23 hours plus 56 minutes, that is a false assumption. Full rotation is 24 hours and being 24 hours, the official explanation doesn't add up, like I explained, because sunrise would be every day 4 minutes later! Extrapolate that to one full wandering of sunrise around the 'clock' in one year and it becomes obvious: Sunrise is not 4 minutes later every day but going forth and back throughout summer and winter. If it really were as suggested, the sunrise would not be like earlier in summer and later in winter, in relation to the northern hemisphere, opposite for the southern one, but the sunrise would kind of 'travel around the day' throughout one year. Meaning you would have sunrise at 6 h, three months later at 12 h, three months later at 18 h and three months later at 24 h, and three months later at 6 h again. Obviously, that's not the case but instead the sunrise goes back and forth.

Now, let me end with this. The reason why I am sharing this discovery of The True Motion of Earth and her Axis for the last ten years with the world and why I am so vehemently insisting on the importance to publicly share and disclose this fundamental physical-cosmological truth with and to mankind is because there is the very realistic and probable possibility that the angle of the tilting of Earth' Axis is changing right now. Meaning there might be natural factors causing the Axis to start straightening up towards the upright 90° position, which – as you can imagine – would come along with a lot of, let's say, monumental changes for the Earth, environment, climate, weather, biology and much more.

Well, if any signs of a process like that might start to show up, this will pose a tremendous civilizational challenge for mankind and we only ever had a chance to positively react and deal with such a situation, if we at least would have started to comprehend the basic concept of true planetary mechanics and actual cosmological geometry-in-motion. Without such an understanding there would not be the slightest chance to deal with such a situation and the only thing reigning would be absolute chaos, turmoil, panic and destruction. That's the actual reason why I invested ten precious years of mine into that, put my pride away, allowed to be insulted and laughed at by you, wrote over a million letters and emails to so-called experts, movers & shakers and elite institutions who had nothing but contempt, hate and ridicule for me but kept going although being called an effing retarded, self-absorbed spammer and more.

Believe it or not, my dear mankind, I haven't done this for me; I have done this for You! And whether you actually deserve this gift or not, well, I don't want to be the judge here. You know, a man gotta do what a man gotta do! So, I just did what I had to do. Let Life Itself be the judge upon mankind – A'ho!
